I personally feel that violence has become to graphic and expolicit for television standards. I do not want my nieces or future children learning how to äct our anger and revenge" from programming meant for entertainment. The news and education can teach children the realities of life and proper safeguards. But graphic blood, gore and explicit murderous or revenge plots are not appropriate.

Thank you for requesting comments and I am sure there is a way to educate children against dangers and the realities of the world without blood, gore and teaching them that shooting and fighting is "fun"and makes a "hero" out of them.
